Art Unit: 3617

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 26-31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ellis (cited by Applicant) in view of Mogonye. Ellis discloses a method for using a sporting device with a sport board 10 having a top surface with at least two sets of foot pads 16 positioned at various angles with respect to each other, the foot pads having hooks and loop elements. Also disclosed by Ellis is a foot piece 21 with a planar sole and hook and loop fastening elements (note Figures 2 and 3). Ellis does not disclose removably affixing an upper surface of a removable sole to the bottom surface of the footpiece. Mogonye teaches a footpiece with grip elements 21 which entirely cover the sole and are removable. It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to form method of Ellis to removably affix the sole to the footpiece for easy and quick replacement as taught by Mogonye.

Additionally, it would have been an obvious choice of engineering design to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made would have been to form the sole of rubber for improved comfort and durability.

3. Claims 18-25 are allowed.

4. Applicant's arguments filed October 15, 2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant alleges that Ellis and Mogonye do not disclose removing the bottom surface of the footpiece from the top surface of the board. However, Ellis clearly discloses removing a bottom surface of a footpiece from the top surface of a board.

Additionally, Applicant alleges that Ellis and Mogonye do not disclose removably affixing an upper surface of a removable sole to the bottom surface of the footpiece. However, Mogonye clearly discloses affixing an upper surface of a removable sole to the bottom surface of a footpiece. Such a combination would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made.
